

Free Photos For Educators*

With budgets usually smaller than they should be, finding a free education resource is always welcome. If you would like some photographs for use by your students or for your own use to add interesting images to assignments, posters, presentations, or other materials, there is a completely free Web site with tens of thousands of free photos you can use for those purposes! Each photograph has been contributed by the photographer for royalty-free use, and you pay nothing to download as many photos as you want.

What's the catch? There isn't one! The site contains details about why the site exists and the generous terms for use of the photos. It also explains what a "morgue file" is! Point your Web browser of choice to:

<http://www.morgueFile.com/>

You'll quickly see why so many users of the site sing the praises of this incredible photo resource!

* Use of photos is not limited to educational purposes, although education is a key element of the purpose of the site. This promotional sheet was not designed or provided by the site, but was instead created by one of the contributing photographers (jppi/Stuart Whitmore) and may have been printed by any other user of the site. Photos on this sheet, from left to right, are "treefrog2.jpg" by binks/Elaine; "lapices2.jpg" by kanlee/Carlos; and "constanttime3.jpg" by doctor_bob/Tony Roberts. You are welcome to make unlimited copies of this sheet for your fellow educators.
